French Comfort.

In the best hotel in Paris one gets luxury, comfort and even splendor, but never one's cards or notes, according to Harper's Bazaar. There is a fatal gulf for these. One is a number, not an individuality. The table is, however, very luxurious. It is a clean and well ordered caravansary. As for the comfort of warmth in winter, they do not know the meaning of the word. We are justly accused of exaggerating the heat of our rooms in America; the furnace is denounced; but after freezing to death in Paris, one of the coldest cities, very far north, one returns willingly to the heated rooms of America.

We exaggerate the excellence of the French bed. There is no such thing in France as that comfortable, broad, low thing which we call a French bed. A high, hard, narrow shelf is the apology for it.

We exaggerate our comforts by having gas in our sleeping rooms and hot and cold water in our stationary washbowls and bathtubs. They never exaggerate comfort in France. You have as many candles as you will pay for, and no bath, unless you order it, when men laboriously bring you a tub filled with hot or cold water, and take it away after you have bathed.

We exaggerate very much the supposed good living in France. To go to a hotel in Paris to live we must expect out of the season very little good food, very little that is sustaining and nourishing. It is "all sauce." There are no good joints of mutton, no good American desserts. This is an especial discomfort to the sick, who never get good toast

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1899.

THE CRIME OF THE AGE.

The most colossal crime of the age is the war upon the Boers. The better class among England's people are slowly becoming aware of the cause that has precipitated the war, and these people appear to be anxious the world should know that the war is not between the English people and the Transvaal Dutch. The real cause of the war is the ambition of the rich in England who have large interests in the Transvaal, and who desire more of the rich mining interests in that country.

Herbert Spencer, John Morley and many others of the wisest and best men in England are doing all they can do to recall the people from the pursuit of the Boers. The Boers understand the cause much better than the people of England. They know that their country is sought to make fortunes for a few men, and these men, whose pockets will be filled as a result of the war, if successful, will reap a benefit, which will be the price of England's humiliation before the civilized world.

The English in South Africa who know the real cause of the war are opposed to it and are in opposition to its prosecution. The intellect and conscience of England are against the war because the more intelligent are aware of the villainy that is the foundation and cause of the trouble.

The money power, to further its efforts to rule the earth, will if permitted to rule the governments of the nations, drench the earth with blood. The greater cause for shame to the intelligence of the age is the dominion by the money power in the United States. It has attacked liberty and individual right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness in the land of its birth, and has almost destroyed it with the consent of a misinformed people, who will, when it is too late, regret the work that has been done, a better class of the people of England regret its work against the Boer republic.

The wickedness of the money power has become bold and it has cast aside its mask, termed philanthropy and progress, and it is engaged in its satanic work of misery and death to the free on the earth. Freedom and freedom it has no use for, and whenever freedom has a foothold on the earth it is where it is engaged in doing its most villainous work, and in the United States more particularly is the center of its vile and debasing efforts to enslave mankind.

Freedom sought a resting place in the wilderness where it could grow and expand secure from the menaces of tyranny. In the great republic liberty had become too strong to be overcome by gun powder, and the money power, which is a political freebooter, has sought it out and by insidious work its emissaries, aided by its kindred element in our land, are cutting the roots of the tree of liberty, and if the people continue indifferent to its work and the work of those among us and of us who are aiding to bind the shackles of political slavery, they will be so securely fastened that blood only will furnish the means to break its bands.

There is not anything the money power will not do or use to accomplish its ends. It is wickedness in its worse form. The best interests of the race will go down before it, if it is not overcome by the volition of the people. It has outlined its work, which is to control the earth, and its power will be used to make its dominion equal its ambition.

England has been the leading nation for centuries in the work of Christian civilization but the wickedness of the money power, if sustained by that enlightened people, will not only tarnish but will shear it as a nation, of the power and glory it has sustained to modern progress.

England no more than the United States can afford to be obtained to the money power and dragged into the vortex of war to destroy liberty and the individual rights of man to sustain the intended conquests of Mammon.

The money power of the United States controls our government as fully as the money power of Great Britain controls the government of England and the money power of both countries are hand and glove in the work of oppression. The money power of England supported the United States in its aggressive war with Spain, but Mammon had an eye to business when the people of the United States went to war on humane principles to relieve the people of Cuba, and the Philippines were taken in as a prize to that power.

When the war with Spain was closed the money power of England began to prepare for war in the Transvaal which is now in progress and the money power of the United States is supporting that power in England in its work against the Dutch in that country. Trade is the excuse at the Orient but there is no such excuse for aggression and oppression at the Transvaal. It is a clean cut money proposition in the form of gold mines.

THE BOER AND BRITISH WAR.

The latest reliable news from South Africa tells of the positions of the respective contending forces. The Boers are surrounding Ladysmith and are placing heavy guns in position on the hills less than a mile distance from the town. The British are engaged in throwing up breast works in expectation of an early attack. The British have the better guns for service at short range but the large guns of the Boers will be effective when beyond the range of the British artillery. It is reported that the British have surrendered but the news lacks confirmation.

a curious looking egg.

A shark's egg is one of the most odd looking things imaginable and has no more resemblance to an egg, strictly speaking, than it has to a paving stone. In one variety it is pillow shaped and has a long "horn" or "feeler" at each corner. It is about two inches long and the color almost pure black.

It is unprovided with shell, as we understand that word, but the contents are protected by a thick, leathery covering, which has almost as much elasticity about it as a covering of rubber would have.

The "feelers" mentioned catch hold of wind themselves around pieces of seaweed and other floating objects and hang until the egg is hatched.

One variety of the shark lays 18 eggs during the month of April. These float about until early in December, when the little sharks emerge.

Eating Like a Bird.

It isn't as polite as it is intended to be to say that a person has the appetite of a bird. If a human being ate as much proportionately as does the average bird, the sight would be disgusting. In one shrike there have been found the remains of 79 caterpillars, 24 bugs, one field mouse and one leech. A field hawk that was observed for a month is credited with a record of 1,000 mice in that time. A tame owl ate seven mice, one after the other, and three hours afterward ate four more. The robin eats on an average 14 feet of worms daily.

The End.

"What have you been writing, my dear?" asked Mrs. Beechwood of her daughter.

"These are the last sad writes, mamma," replied the girl. "This note tells Mr. Homewood that I have ceased to love him."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

It has never been claimed that

THE MINES OF OLINGHOUSE

Two Lodes in This
Very Promising
District.

WILLIAMS' BIG CLAIM

A Theory Accounting for the Presence of Gold in Porphyry
and Quartzite.

Within twenty-five miles of Reno, a crown flies, is a mountain of gold which will some day be the site of one of the biggest, busiest and richest mining camps that this State has ever seen.

The above is a very optimistic statement with which to begin what the writer intends to make a conservative article, but the facts that will be brought into evidence a little further down the column bear out the predictory statement.

In Olinghouse district, as it is termed, though no separate district has yet been organized there, there is a network of leads striking over every point of the compass.

Of these stringers and leads there are really only two principal gold bearing veins. They parallel each other at a distance of less than half a mile.
In general direction they extend east and west.

The northern ledge is well defined.
It averages from two to six inches on the surface, carrying in the cropping from two dollars to twelve dollars in true milling gold values. This lead widens with depth. At twenty feet it is nearly a foot thick; at fifty feet it is sixteen inches, and at seventy-five feet, the greatest depth to which it has been followed, it is good twenty inches from clay to talc.

The lead dips twenty degrees into the hill, which has a southern slope.
The hanging wall is porphyry and the foot wall is quartzite. There is a good two-inch clay casing on the hanging wall and the foot wall is of talc for the same thickness.

Although this lead has not been fully explored along its entire visible length, which is about a mile, yet enough work has been done to prove that its values are not uniform.

The Fortorn Hope mine is on the pay chute, and ore carrying $1,047 has been taken from the fifty-five foot level, while all the ore extracted from this mine will average in the neighborhood of $35 ton. Below this level the gold is no longer free, but becomes a sulphurite proposition. It may be said at this point that all the mines in the district work into sulphurites at water level, the bed of Olinghouse gulch.

Four very promising claims are located on this lead. In addition to the Fortorn Hope are three others in process of development.

The lower lead has never had a pick struck in it although the super-imposed rock has been torn up for the distance of a mile. The fact is, no one knows to an absolute certainty but a few veins really exists at this point. What is called a ledge is, more correctly speaking, an auriferous dyke.

It is all the way from ten to one hundred feet in width and carrying gold throughout. The dyke is of porous and fractured porphyry of the padding stone variety, green, blue and brown in color in various places. The gold is claimed by the miners of Oling-house to exist in the porphyry, but the writer has the evidence of his eyewitness that this is not the case.

He was shown pieces of the padding stone containing free gold but by carefully examining it the gold was invariably found to be encysted in crystalline quartz. He found the same to be true of the gold bearing quartzites of the district. In places the porphyritic rock is very rich, running into hundreds of dollars; but in such a case the quartz is in greater proportion.

There is only one theory to account for the gold existing in this dyke. In days long past, when the violent seismic convulsions took place, which later became fissure veins, the dykes of porphyry did not open in a uniform fissure, but were cracked and creviced and seemed in every direction. Then, if the accepted theory regarding the formation of gold ledges be correct, the fluid silica carrying with it the vapor of gold passed upward through the fissures opened by the convolution of nature, and reaching the creviced dyke, spread in every direction and formed there crystals in every seam.

This does not in the least argue against the permanency of the lower Olinghouse lead. In fact it is the existential evidence of not merely the existence of a fissure beneath the dyke but of the great richness of that fissure. These dykes doubtless extend to a considerable depth, narrowing as

The first few days of our Early Autumn Sale was a veritable revelation of hundreds of pleased and satisfied patrons. The phenomenal business of the first few days was far beyond our expectations. Crowned with success we will continue for a few days longer to sell goods at the same low prices that we have been doing these few days for the benefit of those of our patrons who did not have the time or opportunity to attend our value giving sale. A Perfect Diagnosis.
Dr. George Fordyce, who came in 1762 from Edinburgh to London, very speedily made himself a name by a series of public lectures on medical science, which he afterward published in a volume entitled, "Elements of the Practice of Physic," which passed through many editions. Unfortunately he was given to drink, and, though he never was known to be dead drunk, yet he was often in a state which rendered him unfit for professional duties.

One night when he was in such a condition he was suddenly sent for to attend a lady of title who was very ill. He went, sat down, listened to her story and felt her pulse. He found he was not up to his work. He lost his wits and in a moment of forgetfulness exclaimed, "Drunk, by Jove!" Still he managed to write out a mild prescription.

Early next morning he received a message from his noble patient to call on her at once. Dr. Fordyce felt very uncomfortable. The lady evidently intended to upbraid him either with an improper prescription or with his disgraceful condition. But to his surprise and relief she thanked him for his prompt compliance with her pressing summons and then confessed that he had rightly diagnosed her case, that unfortunately she occasionally indulged too freely in drink, but that she hoped he would preserve inviolable secrecy as to the condition he had found her in. Fordyce listened to her grave as a judge and said: "You may depend upon me, madam. I shall be as silent as the grave."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Dangerous Trading.
Upon returning to camp we found that John, the driver, had purchased a load of pumpkins, which the native men and women from the Mazoe valley had brought to the wagon to barter.

At first I was pleased, but when I found that John had traded away about 20 pounds of preservative, consisting of alum and arsenic, which he had mistaken for salt, I was filled with dismay! We knew not the villages whence the natives had come, nor could we explain the mistake, as we were ignorant of their language; and before my scared mental vision rose piles of dead Mashonas, pestilence and war on the whites—provided there remained enough live Mashonas to make it.

Hence it was that before daylight the next morning we left for the fox. We made no mention of the matter to any one, but a year later, when visiting the Mazoe valley, I inquired of the natives if there had been any disease among them about the time when the white men arrived in the country. They said there had been an epidemic of stomach aches, but, fortunately, no one had died from it; so my conscience was profoundly relieved.—"On the South African Frontier."

Curd and Cheese.

The rough outlines of cheesemaking are probably familiar to every one. Fresh milk is taken and curded with rennet. The curd is then broken up and the liquid whey drawn off; the breaking up of the curd, its straining and the subjecting of it to pressure are processes repeated several times until eventually the curd has become of the necessary consistency and solidity. It is then set aside, usually for some considerable time, to ripen, and during this time great changes are subtly taking place in its substance, so that the curd, which at first was an unctuous solid, becomes gradually transformed into a palatable cheese.

Suitable external conditions, chief among which is a proper temperature, are, of course, necessary to bring this ripening of the curd to a successful issue, but the real reason of the transformation is the presence of myriads of bacteria, which find in the curd a luxurious dwelling place, where they can live and multiply. That in so living they must abstract foodstuffs from the curd around and give out in turn new substances is merely the natural course of their life, but it makes all the difference between curd and cheese.—Good Words.

The Business Instinct.

Too many people are accustomed to think of politeness in address as appropriate in company, but quite out of place in business. An engaging manner is useful everywhere.

This axiom is amusingly illustrated by a story which Justin McCarthy tells. Soon after the civil war, he says, I happened to be standing on a bridge in New York amusing myself by studying the crowd, when a shrill, youthful voice accosted me with, "Cap' u, shne yer boots?"

The chance distribution of military titles was ready and liberal at the time when so many soldiers were returning to civilian life, and I paid no attention to the invitation.

Just then a rival bootblack passed, and, imagining where the cause of my indifference lay, he advanced, and, pushing past the unsuccessful claimant, he gave me a military salute and appealed to me with the captivating words:

"Brigadier general, shne yer boots?" I had my boots shined on the spot.

Truly Appreciative.

"Do you appreciate poetry?" asked the serious young woman.

"Yes, indeed," answered Mr. Cummins. "There's one piece of poetry that has done me a world of good. Old as I am, there are times when I couldn't tell how to figure without saying 'Thirty days hath September, April, June and November.'—"Washington Star.

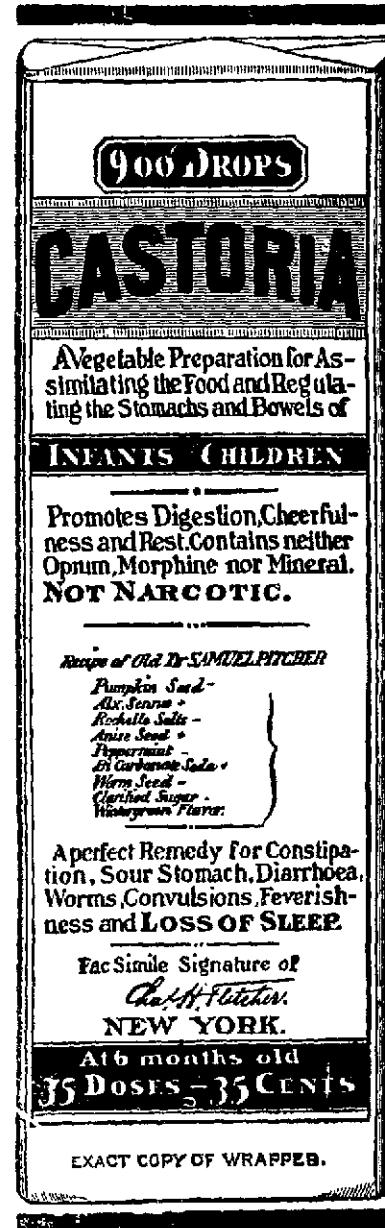

Modulated Tones.

"A woman, I notice, always lowers her voice to ask a favor."

"Yes, and raises her voice if she doesn't get it"—Chicago Record.

To Stop Nosebleed.

To stop nosebleed cut some blotting paper about an inch square, roll it about the size of a lead pencil and put it up the nostril that is bleeding. The hollow in it will fill the space between the tube and the nose and will very soon congealate and thereby stop the flow of blood.—New York Times.
